ARTIST SPOTLIGHT Ekaterina Arslambakova

Ekaterina's work directly responds to the surrounding environment and uses everyday experiences as a starting point, later becoming metaphors for events in her life. Often these are framed instances that would go unnoticed in their original context. She creates work that deals with the documentation of events and the question of process and physical representation. With a conceptual approach, she tries to increase the dynamic between audience and her work by objectifying basic human emotions and investigating the duality that develops through different interpretations. She finds the creative process just as exciting and important as the finished work and often uses the act of art making as a form of therapy to bring forth the subconscious and ordinarily hidden.

ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

Benjamin Jancewicz

Benjamin creates art using new techniques for an age-old purpose: to tell stories and inspire action. As a child, hewas inspired by cartoons, drawn characters and stories brought to life with no visible brushstrokes or shading. My fascination for that aesthetic met its match in my discovery of vector art. After producing photography, sketch and graphic design work years, the vector technique brought him full creative fulfillment for the first time. Now he uses the painstaking process to create pieces that share positive messages using unique color palettes, detailed shapes and countless nuances of light, shadow, and mid-tonal values. My work often uses themes themes of love, cultural understanding, fantasy and futurism to appeal to and inspire the imagination of diverse audiences.

STEVE BRUZA

Steve's serious camera work began as photographer and photo editor for his college newspaper when there was only 35mm film and wet darkrooms. Covering campus news and sports taught him how to capture images to enhance a story as well as how to make a strong photograph. Much later in life digital photography reignited Steve's creative photography interest and he attended workshops and joined camera clubs as an outlet to learn and apply new skills. He has been an active member of several Maryland Camera Clubs since 2002 and achieved five-star awards and master's level in vari-ous club competitions. He is currently an organizer of Creative Exposure Baltimore's MeetUp group and is on the Board of Directors of the Maryland Photography Alliance. Steve's newest passion is ac-quiring vintage lenses to use on mirrorless cameras. Steve finds competition for a specific assignments or gallery contests as one of the most beneficial ways to develop as a creative fine-art photographer. He regularly competes in Baltimore Sun's SunShots and has won first or second place on numerous occasions. One of his winning images was recently selected as one of five Best of the Best for their year-end edition.

MEMBER ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

ELIZABETH BURIN

Elizabeth Burin is an independent artist working in Baltimore. Born in Washington, D.C. and raised in Switzerland, she worked as a museum curator and medieval art historian before turning to studio art. She holds a Certificate of Fine Arts from the Maryland Institute College of Art and is a Signature Artist member of the Baltimore Watercolor Society. Elizabeth exhibits frequently in the mid-Atlantic area and online, and she has received many awards for her work. Elizabeth Burin's artistic inspiration derives from her travels and above all from nature's infinite variety of forms. She values the expressive power of color and often revisits a subject to enhance a coloristic effect. She particularly favors the fluid and luminous medium of watercolor, for layers of transparent pigment provide the key to the brilliance she seeks. More of her work may be viewed at www.ElizabethBurin.com.

MALLORY WIERZBIKI

Mallory Wierzbicki is a self-taught artist. Many of her pen and watercolor creations are inspired by her garden and the outdoors. Mallory puts her own lively twist on objects such as flowers and fruits by melding them with the human form, making sure to represent all bodies in a positive light. Mallory's life-like creations have been featured in Maryland Federation of Art's online exhibition titled, "WOMEN" in 2019. Mallory's work will also be featured in BCAG's Venus exhibit opening this month.

MEMBER ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

TRUDY BABCHAK

Being the daughter of two Holocaust survivors, Trudy Babchak explores the emotions that accompany survival. A recurrent theme in Trudy's paintings is girls at play. This imagery was inspired by a photograph of girls in white dresses dancing on a mountaintop. These children were sheltered in a convent hiding from Nazi persecution. Trudy's palette and imagery are meant to capture the innocence and joy of life, not the specific experiences of those trapped during the war. Trudy earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Maryland, College Park and completed the Post Baccalaureate Program at Maryland Institute, College of Art (MICA). Trudy is represented by HorseSpirit Arts Gallery in Savage, MD and teaches oil painting at the Columbia Art Center in Columbia, Maryland.

Dena Fiat

Working in layers is my main focus. Taking readily available media from my work space and covering a surface is how I begin. It may be water based media, collage or some type of linear foundation. Then, I move on to experimenting with color and texture to develop some type of contrast. Subject matter generally is derived from my current stage of life. I consider myself a mixed media with no particular allegiance to a certain medium. I prefer working 2-dimensionally and generally work in a sketchbook while slowly developing surfaces over time. In my experience no one work is ever truly complete but rather ever evolving along with humanity and time. I graduated from Towson University (Bachelors in Art Ed.) in 2009 and Johns Hopkins University (M Ed) in 2012. She lives in Baldwin within my husband, identical 4 year old twin daughters and our 7 year old golden retriever.
